

PERMACULTURE & ECOFRIENDLY GARDENING

Permaculture principles are highlighted through a real-life example, where the yard of a small urban home was converted to an edible food forest and wildlife habitat that produces enough food to be nearly self-sufficient with minimal labor.

Come away with ideas on:

- Free tools to evaluate land features on your property
- How to optimize rainwater collection and distribution in the garden
- Selection and placement of perennial edible food forest plants in small urban spaces
- Incorporating native plants and habitat for pollinators and birds to enhance food production and organic pest management
- Optimizing use of current or potential resources on the property
- Saving resources and producing no waste
- How a permaculture-based garden can be more adaptable and resilient to climate change

YAVAPAI COUNTY MASTER GARDENER VIRTUAL PRESENTATION

- ▶ Thursday, October 28, 2021 – 6:30pm
- ▶ Presenter: Dianne Kadonaga

Nature has been Dianne's best teacher for life lessons, so she brought it to her own place to enjoy. She strives to live a life with the least impact on the earth through a zero-waste and a sustainable lifestyle. She's a Franklin County Master Gardener, Pollinator Specialization Advocate, and Yavapai Master Gardener Associate. Dianne has a native plant nursery in Ohio and does garden consultations so she can promote what she loves and feels most important for the future.
