

WATER IN THE NATIVE WORLD – SPECIAL ISSUE WEBINAR SERIES

A Confluence of Anticolonial Pathways for Indigenous Sacred Site Protection

Rachel Ellis and Denielle Perry

Changed Date! Thursday, June 11th, 2-3pm (MST)

Zoom link: <https://arizona.zoom.us/j/91369354661>

Webinar features papers from "Water in the Native World," a special issue Dr. Karletta Chief was the guest editor for. Papers are about water challenges facing tribes where Indigenous scientists and community members, and students lead and are involved in addressing the challenges. Download at:

<https://ucowr.org/journal/current-issue/>

This work was supported by three federal grants. The first grant is the National Science Foundation Award Number ICER 1747709 "Water in the Native World; A Symposium on Indigenous Water Knowledge and Hydrologic Science." The second grant is the United States Department of Agriculture National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Water for Agriculture Challenge Area Award Number 2015-69007-23190 "Enhancing climate resiliency and agriculture on American Indian Land. The third grant is University of Arizona National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences Superfund Research Program P42ES004940 "Risk and Remediation of Metal-Mining Wastes."

Native Waters
on Arid Lands

For more information contact:

Karletta Chief at kchief@email.arizona.edu, Associate Professor & Extension Specialist